Section 2: DR Program Overview and Policies

The Technology Incentive (TI) program's objective is to provide cash incentive payments for the installation of equipment or control software supporting demand response (DR). By promoting enabling technologies, PG&E helps its customers keep California's energy grid operating under extreme conditions.

The 2009 TI program is not accepting incentive applications until the CPUC approves PG&E's proposed program and budget for 2009-2011. When the CPUC approves the proposed program design and funding for TI, PG&E will issue a new NRR – DR application that will include incentive application information for the TI program.
